

The challenge here was to ensure that we applied all the tax rules properly, based on what E&Y had provided us through their documentation - essentially a series of spreadsheets that needed to be distilled into rules that the development team could incorporate into the payment cycle.

Since this was a complex feature, we initially released it to a designated set of clients to gather feedback and iron out any bugs.

We also organised some training sessions for some of our major clients to help them become more comfortable with the process.
